A large drop of incomprehensible incompatibility is said to be disturbing the harmony that should exist among the Democratic officials at Frankfort. Machines have already wrecked the party a time or two and we should be careful about forming another with the same old cogs in it.

Marse Henry opened up Saturday with a two column editorial praising the speeches of Gov. Wilson and predicting the overwhelming election of the Democratic ticket. "To Your Tents, O, Israel!" was the caption of the article, and it was a good one. Mr. Watterson is not an Achilles, sulking in his tent.

Next Friday is election day in Cuba and they have already had one bloody riot in Havana. Gomez and Zayas are at each others' throats and the defeated candidate is almost sure to "revolute" and make it necessary for Uncle Sam to act as policeman.

They sometimes soon forget. Mrs. L. Ross Clark, widow of a Titanic victim, of Los Angeles, Cal., married before her husband had been dead five months, and the parents of Clark are suing for the custody of their baby grandson.

Col. Roosevelt has sued a Michigan editor who said he was intemperate in the use of both liquor and language. Teddy is too old a hand at the business to pay any attention to political criticism. Whom the gods would destroy they first make mad.

Wm. Meyri, of Lawton, Mich., a prodigal son who ran away from Zurich, Switzerland, when 15 years old, has been notified to come back home and get a fortune of $500,000 that has been left him. He will probably go.

Adrianople, taken by the Bulgars, is a scattering, uncared-for city of 80,000 people, half Turks and the rest Armenians, Greeks and Jews. It has been a storm center in the wars of 600 years.

Prof. Jos. H. Kastle has been chosen to succeed M. A. Scovell, deceased, as head of the Kentucky Experiment Station. He is regarded as one of the most eminent chemists in the country.

All the country sympathizes with Gov. McMillin, candidate for Governor of Tennessee, in the death of his only son, Brown McMillin, a brilliant young fellow 25 years of age.

Women will vote for President in six states—California, Washington, Idaho, Colorado, Wyoming and Utah, and Roosevelt is expected to carry four out of the six.

Harry Sommers continues to get up one of the brightest columns of paragraphs to be found in any State paper, on the front page of the Elizabethtown News.

Senator Gamble declares he will not vote for the "turncoat" electors in South Dakota, who, elected as Taft Republicans, have changed over to Roosevelt.

The 51 life insurance companies doing business in Kentucky last year received $8,578,445.00 in premiums and paid out $3,528,033.78 in losses.

Five of the men charged with killing Ed Callahan have been held without bail and ten others put under bonds of $2,000 and $3,000.

Democratic orators who predict victory this fall are doing so without any danger of being given a horse laugh after the election.

Broncho Franks has mounted the raging stump for Taft, but this time his eloquence will be wasted. It is all over but the shouting.

IMPORTANT FAIR MEETING

Largest Attendance Yet at Last Saturday's Enthusiastic Gathering.

OPTION PROPERTY SECURED

Two Kinds of Stock to Be Disposed Of to Suit All.

The meeting of the committee to solicit subscriptions for stock in the Pennyroyal Fair Co. held last Saturday morning was largely attended and important business was transacted.

Everybody was enthusiastic and all expressed themselves as being much in earnest and none expressed any doubt as to the results of the efforts in securing the amount of subscriptions necessary to put on a real old-time fair next year.

Two or three committees made reports that were most encouraging.

After much deliberation a resolution, submitted by R. E. Cooper, as to the character of the stock to be sold, was adopted as the final action of the promoters. Mr. Cooper's resolution, briefly stated, is that two kinds of stock, aggregating $40,000, shall be sold. Shares shall be $25 each. Every purchaser shall be entitled to one ticket for each $25 worth of stock subscribed for. These tickets are good for every day in each year that the fair is held, year after year. If a man has three in family besides himself and he takes four shares he is entitled to four tickets. These tickets will be transferable but do not draw any dividends.

The other class of stock is called interest-bearing stock, and tickets of admission are not issued on them, the purchaser receiving his share of the dividends that may be declared year after year.

On the basis of the two kinds of stock the committee is to go immediately to work and raise the capital stock of the company as soon as possible. There is every reason to believe that all the stock will be taken in a short time.

The committee wants everybody to know that there is no limit to the purchase of stock of either character. They can take stock of both kinds on all they want of either. This puts the man who only takes one or two shares of either class on an equal footing with the one who takes $500 or $1,000 worth—all shares alike. This is so plain that it can be understood by all.

Everybody seems to be of the opinion that the time has arrived for the people of this county and city to wake up and keep in line with cities all around us who are holding county fairs, every one of which has proven a success and been of incalculable benefit to the farmers of the sections where the fairs are held.

A committee appointed to negotiate for and obtain an option on the property previously selected on which to erect the amphitheater, grand stand, stables and other buildings, reported that they had closed an option on part of the property of Dr. W. W. Williams with a 60-foot right of way through the property of Williams & Radford. The committee also reported that it expected to be able to announce in a few days an option on the property adjoining that of Dr. Williams in a few days.

An Illinois Central Railroad Company official ten days or more previous to the meeting authorized one of the committee to say that his company would most willingly put in a side-track and build a protected passenger platform at the fair grounds by the time the first fair is held. That means that the railroad company will furnish transportation for passengers and stock to the fair grounds and that trains will be run as often as necessary.

CONGRESSMAN A. O. STANLEY
Who Speaks at the Court House To-day at 1:30 P.M.

STANLEY ON TRUSTS

Able Congressman Will Speak at the Court House at 1 O'clock.

POPULAR AS AN ORATOR.

Mayfield Messenger Tells of Taft Is Given Majority In Only His Speech There Last Week.

Hon. A. O. Stanley will speak for the Democratic ticket at the Court House at one o'clock this afternoon and a good speech is in store for all who hear it. The Mayfield Messenger says of his speech last week:

"Congressman A. O. Stanley delivered a political speech at the court house Wednesday night to a house fairly full of our representative citizens. Mr. Stanley took his text from one of Mr. Wilson's points used in his acceptance of his nomination for the presidency, in which he said that 'Private interests controlled and managed the legislation of this country.'"

"Mr. Stanley, although not an eloquent speaker is a forceful one and being familiar with the workings of the tariff and the trusts makes him a very entertaining speaker. He has been in congress for a number of years and will be re-elected at the coming November election. Is forty-five years old and has made his mark in congress above the average representative."

"Mr. Stanley is a candidate before the state primary election of 1913 for a seat in the United States senate to succeed Mr. Bradley."

"Mr. Stanley met quite a number of our people here, who gave him a hearty welcome, showing clearly to him that he was among friends and who were appreciating his efforts to bring about the election of a Democrat for the presidency."

All that is now necessary to be done for securing a big fair for next year is for the people to show their enterprise by taking the stock readily, so that by next fall the needed buildings can be put up and the grounds put in condition.

A meeting will be held next Thursday night and another next Saturday morning at 10 o'clock.

Attorney Frank Rives was strong enough yesterday to be in court during motion hour.

LEAD PIPE CINCH SHOWN

New York Papers Put Wilson's Plurality At More Than 1,000,000.

ROOSEVELT RUNNING SECOND

Four Small States For Sure.

The New York Herald and the New York World Sunday morning both predicted that Gov. Wilson's majority on November 5 will be from 1,000,000 to 1,125,000, based on straw votes taken in debatable States, and the Herald conceded to the Democrats twenty-six of the thirty-five debatable States. Its figures show a gain since the last poll for both Taft and Roosevelt.

Thirty-five States Polled

Test ballots to the number of 270,923 have been taken by the Herald. Thirty-five debatable States have been canvassed in this manner. Wilson has 110,933, Roosevelt 82,575 and Taft 58,413. Reports from the newspaper's special correspondents in the various States are that Wilson will carry twenty-six of the thirty-five debatable States canvassed; that Roosevelt will carry five—California, Washington, Idaho, Michigan and Illinois, and Taft four, New Hampshire, Rhode Island, Utah and Wyoming. Of the thirteen States not canvassed eleven Southern States, conceded to Wilson, giving him thirty-six States in all. The other two unpollled States are North Dakota, where indications favor Wilson, and Vermont, which the Herald is inclined to give to Taft.

NEW CHURCH DEDICATED

Large Gathering and Balance Of Debt Raised In Few Minutes.

NEW BUILDING ON OLD SITE.

Rev. Powell, Of Louisville, Preached An Impressive Dedictory Sermon.

Last Sunday morning over a thousand people of all denominations gathered at the new Brick Baptist church, six miles west of Hopkinsville.

The historic old Brick church was one of the first brick houses of worship built in Christian county, and hence its name. The ravages of time had rendered it unfit for use and the members determined some months ago to rebuild on the old site. Calls to raise the necessary funds had been answered so freely that, after pledges had been made within $600 of the amount needed, contracts were made to tear down the old building and erect a new one on its site.

The present pastor is Rev. James P. Cleavenger, and he and those interested with him in putting up the new place of worship deserve much praise for their untiring labor and manifest zeal in carrying out the work to a finish. They have reared a more modern building with a seating capacity about equal to the old one. While no special effort has been made at ornamentation, the interior has been finished in that neat and pleasing manner that makes it an ideal country church.

The dedicatory services were interesting to those who were so fortunate as to get inside and witness them, for there were hundreds on the outside who patiently remained until the close of the services.

After a most impressive sermon by Rev. W. D. Powell, of Louisville, a call was made for pledges to lift a debt of $600 which had been incurred by the committee in charge of its construction. In a few minutes the sum, and considerable more, was raised.

When this was done a bountiful dinner was spread. Anticipating that a large crowd would be on hand the good people of the neighborhood had brought with them substantial and sweet things sufficient to satisfy almost as many more as were present. There were many present from the city, many of whom were liberal in their contributions to lift the church debt.

AFTER ILLNESS

Of Several Months Mrs. Shaw Passes Away.

Mrs. Mary Shaw, widow of the late Rev. T. H. Shaw, died at Fairview Friday, after an illness of several weeks, aged 68 years. At one time Mrs. Shaw was a resident of this city. Later she resided in Chattanooga, Tenn., and moved to Fairview some months ago. She was a member of the Methodist church and was held in the highest esteem by all who knew her.

Back to The Farm.

Roy Cayce, who sold his livery stable to C. J. Gee, began moving back to his farm yesterday. Mr. Cayce had a fine offer for his farm of 300 acres near the city a few days ago which he turned down. After trying city life for two years the call of the soil was too much for him and he is going back to breathe the pure country air and hear the singing of the birds. Mrs. Hayward Richards and her father will again occupy the Richards home, which Mr. Cayce has vacated.

WAR NEWS

The allied Servian and Bulgarian armies Saturday captured the Turkish stronghold of Uskup, which, with Adrianople, is one of the two strongest fortified points in European Turkey. The Turks retired and the town was occupied without resistance. Adrianople is reported on fire.

Eighty per cent of officers who participated in the fighting on October 22-23 were killed or wounded.

The Turkish eastern army is stretched out between Visa and Adrianople and is engaged in checking the advance of the Bulgarians, who are trying to push back the Turks and at the same time to cut the communications with Constantinople.

DEAF AND DUMB PEOPLE

Procured License Saturday To Be Married Yesterday.

Something unusual in the matrimonial line occurred in this county yesterday. Mr. Harry C. Dunham, of Louisville, obtained license Saturday to wed Miss Mary A. Hord, whose home is a few miles from the city, on the Greenville road. When the clerk issued the license Saturday about all that could be learned of the wedding was that it was to occur Monday. As the prospective groom is both deaf and dumb, the clerk did not do very much talking. His bride is also a deaf mute.

License was also issued Saturday for the marriage of Mr. Shelley Ingram and Miss Lois Yancey, young people of this county.

One of the most startling changes ever seen in any man, according to W. B. Holsclaw, Clarendon, Tex., was effected years ago in his brother. WATER POWER IN ICELAND.

There are many waterfalls in Iceland which are well adapted to be harnessed, but the difficulty is that most of them are remote from the centers of population. There are, however, many which are available for the generation of power and quite recently a syndicate purchased a large extent of ground in the neighborhood of Thorlakshaven, as well as several large waterfalls situated in the mountain regions in the interior. It is stated that the falls will be able to furnish as much as 200,000 horse power. The present syndicate is to construct a good port upon its ground and it will furnish a supply of current to different industries which are situated in this district. One of the newest enterprises will be the construction of works for manufacturing nitrogenous products on the Birkeland-Eyde electric system.

RICH MILK FROM FAT COWS

Holstein Breeders Take Advantage of This Fact—Point is of Interest and Value.

Cows which are fat at the time of calving will, other conditions being equal, give richer milk than those which were thin. They take the fat from their backs and ribs and put it into the milk pail. Holstein breeders have been taking advantage of this fact, as is indicated by many of the seven-day Holstein records. As an average of fourteen Holstein cows, it was found that during seven days early in the milking period, they had a butter fat percentage of 4.35. But the average for the whole year was only 3.42. The Missouri experiment station has conducted some very interesting work in regard to this point. It has kept record on a number of cows which have been unusually fat at calving time. Invariably the fat cows lost rapidly in flesh after calving, and the percentage of fat in the milk is abnormally high. In one instance the percentage of fat in the milk three days after calving was 5.68. The percentage declined day by day till a week after calving it was 4.34 and two weeks after calving it was 3.85.

The fact that fat cows are likely to give richer milk than those which were thin is not only a point of interest, but it is of direct value. Besides throwing some discredit on seven-day tests, it indicates the importance of good feeding during the period just previous to calving. Just after calving it seems to be necessary slightly to underfeed if the cow is to be in condition to put the greatest percentage of fat into the milk pail in a short time.

SIDELIGHTS ON THE GRIDIRON

By WALTER H. ECKERSALL.

Former star quarterback University of Chicago team, and member for three successive years of the All-American eleven.

SEEKING A PROFESSIONAL JOB.

Does it pay the college athlete to turn professional? This question has been asked a thousand times by players and coaches as well as many professors. Every college athlete has had his amateur standing questioned. Every man that proves to be a little better than his team mates has his past record looked into. Then, after defending his amateur standing through his college course, he, four times out of five, finally turns professional.

Has he gained by it or not? Is the questioned often asked. Coaches and trainers, as well as professional athletes who take active part in playing games, generally receive what is considered good money. It is right that they should, as the life of a professional coach and athlete as an instructor or player generally is short.

Coaches hold up to the prospective freshman the opportunity they will have to become a coach after their college course is completed. They tell him how much money it will be possible to earn, and what a large number of offers of good positions they have for their former athletes. It looks good to the freshman.

He goes to school, and oftentimes pays more attention to athletics than to his subjects, although not as much of this is true now as formerly, when strict rules were not enforced as to study standards. The freshman forgets the old college saying, "Sport for sport's sake," and plays simply for a reputation, to be in greater demand when he is through school and wants a position as a coach.

He has worked three of four years to reach the place where he now stands in college athletics. Then comes his chance to turn professional and be a coach, or sign up as a player on some professional ball nine. Maybe he is successful. He has made good. He develops a championship team, or plays ball on a team in the first division of some ball league. He has a job for next season.

Meanwhile, what does the now famous coach do during his off season? He may turn to his profession or trade, but more than likely there is no place open for him with the trade, and the man with the profession has no clients or patients, as the case might be, waiting for him.

There are few good men who are good all round athletes and, therefore, good all round coaches. Most athletes have their specialty. They are good in one or two branches of athletics, but not in all. Athletic sports come at different seasons of the year, therefore but few of the coaches are engaged for the season. The baseball player has his winter, when there is nothing doing. It is plain to be seen that the off season spoils the extra earned during the busy season.

Of course there are exceptions to this rule. I am considering the general run of the professionals—the men who depend only on the money earned during the athletic season.

Then comes the end—the much dreaded but inevitable end of the man's career as a professional athlete. It may be caused to the professional player by a strained tendon, ill health or, in the case of a baseball player, by an arm going bad. At any rate, there is bound to be an end, or at least a drop. The coach may become, if he does not watch out, what the students are pleased to term ancient. Then the manager of the different teams is urged to get a new coach.

Every year these men spring something new. It is these coaches that the other teams fear—not the players. These men are examples of the ex-college star who turned professional and made athletics their life work, and have proved successful.

Where the few succeed as professional athletes many fail. The reasons for these failures are many and varied. Sometimes the young athlete gets into fast company, and gets discouraged and quits. Sometimes the new coach has not enough material to work with. In fact, an old timer could not make a team out of the candidates that appear on the field.

It is hard matter for the young athlete just out of college and just entering professional ranks to get started. The great offers of his coach, made when he was a freshman, too often prove pipe dreams. Then often, after he does get a place, he loses out because of some reason like those I have named or one similar. He then turns to his trade or profession, but the classmate who got busy as soon as he left college at that trade or profession has a year's start at the beginning. Has it paid him to enter the ranks of the professional athlete? (Copyright, 1912, by Universal Press Syndicate.)

PLUSH MUCH FAVORED

IS SEEN IN ALL EXAMPLES OF THE NEW MILLINERY.

Fad for Huge, Low Hats, With Little Trimming, Seems Likely to Hold Over--Some Charming Color Combinations Seen.

Fall hats have been blossoming plentifully ever since early in August, and now even the fuzziest and warmest of plush and beaver and fur hats are on view.

Plush in particular, fairly romps through the new millinery, figuring in every type of hat from the soft little tailored model for street and outing wear to the handsomest of big dress hats, and white plush, though lamentably impractical, takes precedence.

"Oh, you can clean it easily with French chalk," the saleswoman says airily--but you can't, and there will be sad sighs in connection with those white plush hats a little later when soot and dust have done their worst. While they are clean, however, they are soft and pretty and becoming, and Cassandra was a deservedly unpopular woman; so a truce to dire prophecy.

There are two kinds of plush, one with thick soft velvet like pile and one with longer nap and a little more of the look of silk beaver. The latter is the one more often used for the dress hat and there is frequently a low plain crown or slightly draped crown of this plush in white associated with a wide brim of black velvet or black satin.

A single great velvet rose white or black may be the only trimming, for the summer fad for huge low hats, little trimmed, seems likely to hold over; but more often the trimming is some fancy feather set at a spiny angle or a full egret or tuft of paradise plumes oddly and somewhat rakishly posed. Full, fluffy trimming effects concealing the hat lines are as little used as they have been during the summer. The line is the thing, and in the small hats, whatever trimming is applied is likely to be narrow and high, while the trimming of the larger hat is usually low and unobtrusive or narrow and angling.

Fashions in Ostrich Plumes. There are, of course, many exceptions to this rule. Beautifully shaded or plain toned ostrich plumes curl out over some of the wide brims or around low crowns, but so far few of them stand up in the old dashing fashion.

Large tulle bows do blur the outlines of some of the hats, but these bows appear most frequently upon medium sized hats, not upon the large shapes, and often the whole hat is of the tulle, with touches of fur to lend a cold weather appropriateness. Pretty hats of this type are shown in soft nut browns with narrow lines of skunk or other dark furs and a little dull gold lace here and there under the brown tulle. Attractive all black hats of tulle are numerous, too, but will doubtless give way as cold weather comes on.

Big, soft, draped velvet or plush crowns on the Tam O'Shanter order are seen in both large and medium sized hats, and among the innumerable black and white models offered for "first hats" there are many whose lightly draped crowns are of white satin, while the brims are of black velvet or black satin beaver.

These black and white hats are legion, particularly among the small, semi tailored hats, and there is little that is new in shape among them. The lines follow very closely those of the summer small hats, and originality is obtained only by some novelty in the fancy feather or bow of cockade with which the shape is trimmed.

Some of the small soft hats of this comfortable and practical sort are in charming colors, soft old reds, for example, and lovely tones of brown and yellow. One extremely good looking imported model with round crown and close rolling brim was in chamomile color or beaver, soft and pliable as velvet. The brim was faced with dark brown velvet, and, oddly enough, but most effectively, the trimming was a slightly draped band of thick, soft smoky gray silk embroidered in dull gold. The color scheme sounds unattractive, but on the contrary was exceedingly successful.

Dark Blue Continues Popular. Dark blue is a popular millinery color, as it has been during the summer, and is frequently combined with white, after the fashion of the black and white models, or is relieved by a lighter vivid blue or some one of the vieux rouge tones.

Taupe is another of the popular color ors in millinery and is used even more for trimmings than for hat shapes. This color tones down satisfactorily most of the brilliant hues and in fur, marabout, velvet, tulle, etc., gives good trimming effects. A draped toque of glowing geranium red, for example, has taupe marabout next the face and a feather fancy of marabout and heron posed at a curious angle.

Moleskin is much used also to sound the modish taupe note in millinery, and there are quantities of chic little toques fashioned from this fur and matching velvet or silk or felt, with some dull gold or silver ornament or a dash of bright color as a relieving note.

Barbaric bits of embroidery in bright wools or silks trim some of these fur toques and similar small shapes in velvet, beaver or plush. Another trimming fancy suitable only for the little outing or tailored hat is the use of tiny narrow leather straps and buckles or tiny gold buttons, such as are provided in various gay colors for the ornamentation of white or black belts. Several of these set one above another on the front of a soft, round crown roll brim hat in plush, beaver or velours make a smart trimming for the outing hat, but the idea is of course merely a passing fad and will soon be tiresome.

Preferred Hat Shapes. The small high shapes or small shapes trimmed high will in all probability take the lead as first hats for autumn wear, consorting amicably with the tailored costumes which are the first essential of the fall outfit, and the French designers have sent over many of these on Girondin, Marquise and various nondescript lines.

For their trimming, as has been said before, are the high narrow bows and cockades and feathers. A single ostrich plume standing straight and curling over and forward at the end is posed on the front in some of these small models and often this plume shows wonderful shading through several colors. Coque feathers, too, are used to lend height, and various uncurled feathers are pressed into service.

But quite in contrast to these high arrangements are low trimmings even on certain types of small hats, an ostrich plume, for instance, curling around the hat and falling low over the ear and throat or even over the shoulder. Trimming is set under the hat brim, too, flat wings or bows or plumes that depart from their flatness to droop low at side or back.

The mustard and sulphur yellows and the Rappi shades are modish in millinery, black usually toning down their brightness and making them less trying to the average complexion.

A Tuscan hat, lined with soft white straw and edged with black velvet is the subject of the illustration

Tea Gowns of Ninon. Some of the bordered ninons that nave been so prevalent during the summer, and were in many quarters appreciably reduced in price during the recent sales, fashion into the daintiest tea gowns under deft manipulation. By a process of mitered corners the borders can be arranged to run up either front, as well as round the hem, while in these days of daintily apparent seams the remainder of the story becomes a mere bagatelle.

Over a basis of soft white satin draped with point de Bruxelles lace there was arranged a sort of tunic coat of rose ninon, bordered with a gold design, a sash of old blue crepe defining the waist of underdress, and only really revealing its presence just in the immediate center front. The ensemble was quite lovely.

Smart Fall Costume.

A lovely little gown for smart afternoon wear, which would be equally useful on autumn days with rich furs, and which bears the unmistakable cachet of everything which emanates from Paris is carried out in satin meteor, in a pale coppery shade, shot with flageolet green, and is encrusted with fancy net and lace embroidered in buff and gray flowers, while it is everywhere edged with little bullionness of its own material. The corsage is scooped out in deep oval over a vest of black net over white, and there are big cut jet buttons for further decorations, and a great choux of flageolet green and copper silk on one side.

Pretty Hat Scarfs.

For the outing hats there are to be had "hat scarfs" of Roman ribbon, in soft tones from dark shades to light; these cost $1.10 to $1.35, and can be added to any hat at home, giving just the little touch which takes off the shop look. These ribbons are especially excellent for the hats of Panama straw. Another ribbon novelty for the hat is an imported butterfly bow of taffeta. The ribbon is dotted like the wings of a butterfly, and comes with a set of six small pins, which fasten it in butterfly form; a large tinsel "body" comes for the center of the bow. This is all the trimming a simple hat would require.

Swiss Dresses for Tots.

Dresses of dotted swiss are being shown for the small tots. Many of these have insets of Irish laces or a combination of Irish and one of the pretty shadow laces, for even the little folks have more than one kind of lace introduced into their frocks this fall. Some of these swiss dresses are designed along empire lines, while others have the long-waisted effects so becoming to certain types of children. Dainty little sashes are worn with three dresses, or if the mother does not care for these, the frocks may be worn perfectly plain.

HENDERSON MINISTRELS

Thoroughly Delighted a Large Audience Saturday Night.

MANY HAPPY HITS MADE.

There Were Forty-Five Elks Participating in the Merry Performance.

The Henderson Elks came and saw and conquered Saturday night. With Sam H. Cramwell as interlocutor an old-time minstrel show was pulled off with red fire, music, humor and laughter. The overture was a succession of songs, witticisms and all sorts of antics, with Ben Rash, Charlie Murray, Carroll Dickerson and little Austin Woodward as bright particular stars.

For three hours the fun continued, one good thing after another and everybody was thoroughly pleased with the show.

Terry, Worthy Grand Secretary, for the great work they have accomplished.

11. And as the Kentucky New Era and Hopkinsville Kentuckian have been largely instrumental in adding no small part to the success of this Grand body, therefore be it resolved that we extend to them our thanks and furnish them a copy of these resolutions for publication.

12. That last but not least, to all those who have not received special mention, but so richly deserve it, we extend our grateful thanks.

IN THE DAY OF THE KISS

England, About the Seventeenth Century, Seems to Have Been a Pleasant Place to Live.

Kissing, which has been officially prohibited at the railway station of Saranen, in Switzerland, flourished in England in the seventeenth century to such an extent that the foreign visitor was bewildered by its prevalence. Nicolaus de Bethlen, who traveled in England in 1663, writes that "my brother and I behaved very rudely on one occasion, being unaware that it was customary in that country to kiss the corner of the mouth of ladies, instead of shaking hands, as we do in Hungary. We were invited to dine at the house of a gentleman of high rank, and found his wife and three daughters (one of them married) ready to receive us. We kissed the girls, but not the married ladies, and thereby greatly offended the latter. Duval apologized for our blunder, and told us that when saluting we must always kiss the senior lady first and leave the girls to the last."

The learned and sedate Erasmus, in 1499, wrote a Latin letter from England to his friend Fausto Anfolini advising him to come here at once, for, he remarks: "Here are girls with angels' faces who will receive you with kisses. They come to visit you, kisses again. Should they meet you anywhere, kisses in abundance, in fine, wherever you move, there is nothing but kisses."

In 1466 a Bohemian nobleman named Leo von Rozmital visited England, and in the "Journal of His Travel," published 1577, he noted: "It is the custom there that on the arrival of a distinguished stranger from foreign parts the hostess with all her family goes out to meet him, and the guests are required to kiss them all, and this among the English was the same as shaking hands among other nations."

WHERE LOVE IS SENT

Dexter Chose a Girl Who Didn't Know Beans.

By SUSANNE GLENN.

"It beats me," Grandmother Grey invariably remarked, whenever wedding bells disturbed the quiet atmosphere of Chasefield, "why Dexter Hanson doesn't marry. Half the young folks that get married round here haven't a cent to their names, but they seem as happy and cheerful as kings and queens. And Dexter has a fine farm all stocked ready for him, and his Pa and Ma just aching to move to the village."

"He's good looking enough, the girls seem to like him, and he's been pestering after them ever since the first day he went to school. It beats me!"

It "beat" many a pretty young country girl who secretly thought of Dexter's handsome face and easy manners, too, as well as many a designing mother who thought more about the farm that was his for the taking.

When some of the most daring asked him, straight out, why he did not marry, he always laughed pleasantly: "When I find a girl as smart as my mother I'll think about it!"

"But you know," Mrs. Hanson said mildly, "I was not always as capable as I am now, Dexter. I had to learn by experience just like everyone else!"

"You're the best girl I know of, at any rate," her handsome son always replied, and with that she was forced to be satisfied.

Mrs. Hanson returned from the missionary meeting one early summer afternoon very much excited. "Father," she said, "I've taken a boarder for the summer—I hope you are not going to mind about it. I declare I spoke right out before I thought, and then I hated to go back on my word. The minister had a letter from a minister friend from the city saying that some nice girls from his church wished to come out here for the summer; working girls, you know, who haven't much money to spend, and who want to stay with a private family."

"I picked out a teacher. Her name is Molly Prescott. I've always wanted a girl round the place you know, father," she added hesitatingly.

"Of course you can do as you like, but it don't seem necessary for you to take in boarders, mother," answered Mr. Hanson, heartily.

Dexter smiled over his mother's story.

He smiled again when he was commissioned to meet the young teacher at the station.

"Mother thinks she will try city girls on me for a change," he said with a laugh as he drove away.

The girl on the platform looked white and timid. Her lovely dark eyes seemed to question him anxiously.

"Would you like to drive?" he asked, as he helped her into the carriage.

"Oh no!" She looked quite alarmed. "I am not accustomed to horses," she added apologetically, "and this one seems so large and strong."

Dexter gathered up the reins almost impatiently. "Mother will have a nice time of it looking after her all summer," he thought. And he said very little on the homeward drive.

"Dexter," said his mother several weeks later, "I can't see what you dislike about Molly. She's the dearest girl I ever knew!"

"I never cared over much for vines mother. I've always preferred something that could stand up by its own strength."

"Whatever do you mean, Dexter Hanson? Molly was left alone when she was a little girl, and she educated herself and fought her own way in that dreadful, unfeeling city, until I wonder where her courage came from!"

"Yet she's afraid of cows and little green snakes," observed Dexter, teasingly.

"Just as I'd be afraid of the city streets at night, because I am not accustomed to them. And Dexter, I wish you would not say so much about girls who can cook and sew and drive horses—she feels it, poor child. She has wanted to learn from me, but I tell her to keep out in the sunshine when she has a chance."

"Of course I was only in fun, mother, but if she is too sensitive even to joke, I'll certainly desist," he answered with a provoking smile.

Still he was kinder to the girl in a patronizing sort of way, from which she seemed to shrink to his mother's protection.

"Do you suppose you could get supper for Dexter and Mr. Brady tonight?" asked Mrs. Hanson one day after the early dinner. "Father and I have got to go to town and can't possibly get back. I'll leave everything ready, and show you where to find the things."

"Oh, I shall be glad to do it for you, dear Mrs. Hanson," cried the girl, smiling in spite of the sinking of her heart.

To stay alone without a person in sight—and to get supper for the young man who thought a girl ought to know how to cook!

Molly never heard a word of what was being said to her until Mrs. Hanson lifted the cover of the kettle at the back of the stove.

"You can put on these beans, Molly. They'll keep warm, and the men like them boiled down like this."

Left to herself, Molly carefully locked every door, and covered in the darkened kitchen. An hour dragged by, and then a step on the flagged walk outside seemed to cause her heart to turn a complete somersault.

Peeping through the curtain she beheld the two ragged children who often came to see Mrs. Hanson.

"Oh, come in," she cried, dragging them in joyously.

If only she could keep them with her! Conversation dragged, but the children looked plucked and hungry.

"Do you like warm beans?" she asked suddenly as they became uneasy.

Their expression was enough. Molly dished beans lavishly, and spread big slices of bread and butter. Never had she so much enjoyed seeing anyone eat!

But when they departed, Molly looked at the kettle in distress. Where was the men's supper?

"I'll look in the pantry," she cried at last with a happy thought. "I must not let Dexter Hanson laugh at me!"

There was a big bowl of late roses in the center of the supper table, and Dexter had to own to himself that he liked the innovation.

He had to own too, that the girl in the white frock, with the rose-flush in her cheeks, made a fascinating picture as she poured the tea.

He noted the nervous flutter of her pretty fingers, and his heart smote him.

"Mr. Brady was in a hurry to get home, so he did not stop for supper," he explained, helping himself generously to the tempting beans.

Molly, glancing at him, noted the astonished look when he placed some of the beans in his mouth. She hastily tasted her own; in the tender lusciousness, her teeth encountered one —two—hard, unresisting objects.

The blood pulsed in her cheeks, and she pressed her hands over her eyes, breaking into nervous sobs.

Dexter rose quickly. It was very annoying to have a woman cry! Still he went hastily round the table and put his hand gently on her shoulder.

"Don't feel so badly," he murmured awkwardly, looking down at her. The soft waves of her hair took on unmistakable charms seen so alluringly near.

Choking back her sobs, the girl rose hurriedly.

"I ought to have known better than to have attempted it—I ought to have known I did not know how!" she cried.

Her bitterness showed him how much he had hurt her.

"Molly, Molly," he said, folding her suddenly in his arms. "Tell me about it—dear!"

To his joy, the unexpected tenderness of his manner broke down her reserve and she sobbed softly—it justified his comforting her. It was certainly very satisfying to feel her soft hair beneath his lips, her tender cheek pressed against his shoulder.

"Those poor Fraley children came," she whispered, "and they looked so hungry that I gave them most of our supper. Then I thought I would put in more beans—I did not know it took so long for beans to cook!"

"I did not know it myself, dear,"
he declared solemnly.

"And I wanted to keep the children because—Dexter, I was afraid here, all alone! I know it seems silly to you, but I'm used to living where I can call the police at any moment, and it seems so dreadful not to be able to see anyone at all!"

"Of course it does, Molly. I do not wonder you are afraid, but you'll get accustomed to it."

"Sweetheart, I can't let you go back to the city. Will you stay here—with me?"

"But I cannot cook," murmured
Miss Prescott, meekly.

"Mother will love to teach you."

"And I am afraid of cows—and of those great, high-headed horses."

"You are not afraid with me dear,
and you have no need to go near them alone."

"But no sensible farmer man would want such a wife—I'm not nearly as smart as your mother."

DONOR'S FEELINGS ARE HURT

Man Who Gave $1,000,000 to a New York Museum Had to Pay to Enter the Building.

The Metropolitan museum of New York city received out of the blue sky, as it were, and without warning, a few months ago a bundle of securities aggregating about a million dollars, the income of which was not to be used the benefit of the museum according to the judgment of the trustees without a single condition. The donor was one of New York's quiet, little known Croesuses—or Croesels, if that sounds any better. Upon recovering their breath the trustees conferred one with another as to how they should show their appreciation of this remarkable munificence. No better way occurring to anybody, they elected him a member of the board.

He accepted and, arriving late at his first meeting, took a seat in a quiet corner and listened to proceedings with intelligent interest, but without comment of his own. At the close of proceedings, as the trustees were about to separate and go their different ways, the donor of a million plucked one of them by the sleeve and drew him aside.

"Say," he said, glancing nervously around to make sure that he was not overheard, "I had to pay 25 cents to get into the museum today."

The Opportunity Is Here, Backed By Hopkinsville Testimony.

Don't take our word for it. Don't depend on a stranger's statement.

Read Hopkinsville endorsement. Read the statement of Hopkinsville citizens.

And decide for yourself. Here is one case of it:

Miss L. A. Hester, Fifteenth and Clay Sts., Hopkinsville, Ky., says: "The pain in my back caused by disordered kidneys was so severe some days that I often felt like lying down. If I would walk any distance or over-exert myself in any way, I was troubled most and if I caught cold it made me miserable. It the morning I felt stiff and sore and often found it difficult to dress. A kidney weakness bothered me. I doctored but found little relief. Finally Doan's Kidney Pills were recommended to me and I got a box. They removed the pains in my back and corrected the kidney difficulty."

Bees Preempted Letter Box.

A surprise awaited a rural postman the other day when he set about collecting letters from a box at Alkettgate, near Armanthwaite, Cumberland, England. He found it occupied by a swarm of bees, which made him beat a retreat. Later in the day a gentleman accustomed to bees succeeded in getting them away.

Golden Opportunity.

A stranger passed through our show street the other evening and heard our popular youth and beauty in the strenuous warble of gladness song. Value of Words.

Words are wise men's counters—they do not reckon by them; but they are the money of fools.—Thomas Hobbes

DID THE RACCOON REASON?

Instance in Idaho That Showed at Least the Possession of Much Sagacity.

As another bit of evidence in the never ending discussion concerning the ability of the lower animals to exercise the power of reason a reader sends this amusing little observation, says the Youth's Companion:

We were on a stage journey from Lewiston, Idaho, to Grangeville, Idaho, a distance of seventy miles. The stage stopped for noon at the Fountain house, halfway between the two towns. A large raccoon was chained by the collar to a post in the front yard. After luncheon the driver of the stage gathered up a plate of food from the table and carried it out to where the animal was chained. He set the plate down just out of reach of the raccoon's front paws. The animal strained and reached, but could not cover the distance.

One of the passengers said: "Why do you not place it within his reach?"

"He can reach it," the driver replied.

"He can't unless you move the plate nearer."

"Wait and see," said the driver. The raccoon had by this time given up trying to reach the food and sat whining. He seemed to ponder over the problem for a few moments, then stretched his chain to its fullest extent, turned around, reached out with his hind foot, dragged the plate toward him, reversed the process, grasped it in his front paws and proceeded to enjoy his dinner, much to the amusement of the onlookers and the discomfiture of the man, who was sure he could not accomplish the task.

THE USUAL WAY.

First Millionaire—It's pretty hard to break into society, ain't it?
Second Millionaire—Sure. I had to be operated on five times for appendicitis before I got in.

RATHER TOUGH.

Mrs. Mary E. Williams, director of domestic science in the public schools of New York, was talking about bad cooking.

"Our cooking in some sections is inexcusably bad," she said. "I'll never forget a Christmas dinner I once ate in a bleak New England village—one of those Starkfield places that Edith Wharton writes about.

"That turkey! The waitress, as she took away my plate, asked me if I'd liked it.

"Well," said I, "I've heard about the iron horse, the ocean greyhound and the golden calf; but this is my first experience of the vulcanized rubber turkey."

THE TELESCOPE.

It is more than probable that the real inventor of the telescope was one Leonard Digges, who died about the year 1573. About 1608 John Lipperthay and Zacharias Jansen constructed telescopes of fairly useful qualities. The instruments made by these men were, however, greatly improved by the celebrated philosopher, Galileo, who in 1610 constructed the telescope by the aid of which he made his famous discovery of the moons of Jupiter. Huygens made great improvements on the telescope about the year 1655, and may be said to have attained perfection.

AMUSEMENTS.

Take a week of hilarious merriment and compress it into two hours and forty-five minutes and the result is about as much laughter as mortal is capable of in that length of time. That is "Seven Days," the comedy by Mary Roberts Rinehart and Avery Hopwood which Messrs. Wagenhals & Kemper will present at Holland's Opera House November 2. "Seven Days" is a week of the jolliest, heartiest humor conceivable, and it is the biggest laughing hit the stage has ever seen.

Had Been In Training.

A man who had undergone a court examination by a lawyer in Chicago without faltering for a second was complimented by the lawyer later for his accurate manner of recalling early and minor episodes of his life. "I was well rehearsed for it," said the witness. "Only yesterday I had to fill out an application for a telephone."

NICE WITH AFTERNOON TEA

Suggestions for Delicacies to Serve at Function So Popular With the Gentler Sex.

Scald half a cupful of milk, add half a cupful of boiling water, then cool to lukewarm. Knead and bake as ordinary bread.

Favorite Sandwiches.—Cream two heaping tablespoonfuls of butter, add a cupful of grated cheese, two tablespoonfuls of anchovy essence, a quarter of a tablespoonful of paprika, a quarter of a teaspoonful of mustard and a half cupful of finely chopped olives. Spread between thin slices of buttered bread.

Remove from the fire, add two heaping tablespoonfuls of sugar, one teaspoonful of lemon juice, and half a cupful of whipped cream; beat till well blended, then spread thickly between lady fingers.

Use the Wheel Tray.—This wheel tray can be used for luncheons, dinners, teas, porch parties and also for functions where refreshments are served. Any woman who entertains needs this invaluable assistant to be up to date, to provide correct service and to save the useless steps and unnecessary fatigue required to carry trays around.

IN PUTTING UP PRESERVES

Matter of Importance is the Selection of the Right Kind of Fruit to Be Handled.

Fruit for preserving in any form should be fresh-picked, or gathered, and slightly under-ripe. Such fruit ensures more perfect shape in the finished product and eliminates the possibility of fermented fruit or the loss of pectin or jelly-making property.

Handle soft fruit (peaches, berries, etc.) as little as possible. If it is to be canned in jars, put it into the jars, at once, on hulling or otherwise preparing it.

If berries must be washed, put them, a few at a time, into a colander, pour cold water over them and turn at once upon a large sieve to drain, then hull.

Large hard fruit, as apples, pears, and quinces, should be washed and wiped dry before paring.

Cut apples and other hard fruit, for jelly, into quarters, removing all wormy places or imperfections. Retain the skin and cores. The cores of quinces should be discarded, as the excess of gummy properties does not improve jelly.

Use a silver-plated knife to pare fruit. Peaches, soft pears, plums and tomatoes, set into a wire basket (frying basket) may be plunged into a saucepan of boiling water; after three or four minutes remove to a kettle of cold water for the same time, when the fruit may be quickly and easily peeled. This method of peeling is admissible when a large quantity of fruit is to be put up, but it is thought to detract somewhat from the flavor.

Chicken Pie.

Cut up the chicken and stew it until it is tender, season it with one teaspoonful of pepper, one tablespoonful of salt, half a teaspoonful of ground mace, one teaspoonful of ground ginger, one tablespoonful of chopped onion and two tablespoonfuls of chopped parsley.

Take a deep pie dish and line it with a pie crust, then put a cup in the center of the dish (this cup will hold the gravy). Then put the chicken in the dish, two raw potatoes cut in thin slices and one hard boiled egg cut in slices. Put the potatoes and egg on top of the chicken and cover the dish with pie crust, bake and serve hot.

Swedish Meat Balls.

One pound of finely ground lean beef put through a meat chopper twice, also a small onion, if you like onions; one tablespoon of flour, a little pepper and salt, and cold water enough to mix easily with a spoon; then wet your hands in cold water and shape into balls; put a piece of butter in the frying pan, have pan hot before putting balls in, fry on both sides and push to one side; make brown gravy by browning a small piece of butter and a teaspoon of flour; pour hot water over all and cook five minutes.

St. Denis Salad.

Cut cold boiled potatoes in one-half inch cubes. There should be 1½ cups. Cut cold boiled beets in one-quarter inch cubes. There should be one-third of a cup. Mix the potatoes and beets, add three hard-boiled eggs finely chopped, one-half tablespoon of chopped green pepper and one-half teaspoon of chopped cheese. Moisten with dressing and serve in nests of lettuce leaves.

Tart Paste.

Take one-half cupful of water, one-half cupful of lard, the beaten white of one egg, three tablespoonfuls of powdered sugar, one teaspoonful of cream tartar, and one-half teaspoonful of soda; add flour enough to make a moderately stiff dough.

Troy Pudding.

HIGH SCHOOL WINS AGAIN

Shuts Out The Heavier Cedar Hill Institute Team Last Friday.

WAS EASY FROM THE START.

Next Game Will Be With The Crack Paducah Bunch Saturday.

Last Friday afternoon the High School football team won its third straight game. Their opponents were Cedar Hill Institute, combined with Morris Athletic Club and were much the heavier, but in the end the score was 40 to 0 in favor of High School. The game started off fast and furious and for the first few downs, it looked as if it were going to be a hard fought game, but the fun soon began. Hayes got loose in the middle of the field and after dodging every man on Cedar Hill team put the ball over for the first touchdown. Hayes soon repeated this trick and made another touchdown. Then it was Waller's turn and he ran forty yards for a touchdown. The half ended with the score 20 to 0 in High School's favor.

In the second half, Hayes, Waller, and Roberts made touchdowns. In this half, High School was penalized numerous times for the crowd being on the field and but for this fact the score would have been larger.

The whole High School team played a good game. Coach Blake has certainly instilled into them a wonderful knowledge of football. Their team work, Friday, was all that could be desired as was their interference. Abbt H. at full back played his usual good game, making two spectacular runs for fifty yards from the kick off. Roberts at quarterback also played a good heady game. Hayes and Waller have both developed into good half backs and both or them featured with their open field running. Fuqua and Weeks at the ends played well, and both got away with long gains after receiving forward passes. Radford at tackle played a great game, several times breaking through and blocking plays before they were started.

Next Saturday High School tackles the hardest proposition of the season. On that date they play Paducah High School. Paducah always has a good team, but this year they are exceptionally good. So far they have won every game played and on last Saturday defeated the strong Owensboro High School team thus getting a mighty good start in the championship race. So far things stand as follows:

Just now Pembroke really has but one preacher, Rev. T. L. Hulse, of the Methodist church. Rev. W. E. Mitchell, late pastor of the Baptist church, has gone to Adairville and Rev. E. V. Ferguson recently resigned the pastorate of the Christian church, but will preach at Smith's Grove. He has virtually retired from the ministry. The two vacant churches are negotiating for supplies.

The I. O. O. F. is said to be very liberal in its efforts to settle with injured patrons. Some of the injured carried accident policies with a double liability clause attached and will have almost enough cash to go into business.

The visiting Stars have gone but the moon is doing duty for the twinklers.

And the descendants of the second son of Noah were not "in it"—we mean that Sunday's wreck. The next "scursion" is theirs, and the results, too.

And what comes next before the election? Oh, let's take a rest till then.

The new owners of the gas plant are putting in larger mains and promise a much more satisfactory service in a short time.

Rev. E. B. Landis, who attended Kentucky Synod at Princeton last week, preached a very strong sermon last Sunday to a good congregation. He announced that on next Sunday morning that he would preach on Presbyterianism and what it is doing today. Everybody is invited, and Presbyterians of every church in the city will profit by hearing him.
